

Though traffic and weather are not yet available for my city, I feel it would be a great advantage for drivers to use it. There have been way too many times where you take one route and find it backed up for miles because of an accident. Sure local radio gives you a 3 minute blurb about traffic and weather, but unless you live in a very small city, there is no way to accuratley inform drivers of street delays and problems. The same goes for traffic. In denver, not only can the weather change from instant to instant, but it can be drastically different from street to street. I feel more secure knowing what lies ahead for me and local stations just do not provide that.
